REMINGTON RESEARCH GROUP

Q1: Illinois wildlife like coyotes, foxes and bobcats play a vital role in healthy ecosystems by controlling disease transmission, keeping rodent populations in check, increasing biological diversity, and protecting crops. Do you agree or disagree that wildlife like coyotes, foxes and bobcats are important to healthy Illinois ecosystems?

Agree: 83%

Disagree: 12%

Not sure: 5%

Q2: Wildlife management officials across the country have stated that wildlife killing contests are jeopardizing the reputation of hunters overall, and even the future of hunting itself. Studies show that the American public, while continuing to support hunting generally, is growing less tolerant of hunting practices that they view as inhumane, unsporting, ecologically damaging, or wasteful. As a result, eight U.S. states have now prohibited wildlife killing contests. Do you support or oppose a ban on wildlife killing contests in Illinois?

Support: 73%

Oppose: 19%

Not sure: 9%
